end2end TV, Bexley Archives and Bexley Music have collaborated with young people in Bexley to create a brand new heritage collection. Young people have researched history using archive materials and preserved memories by interviewing past and present pupils. They have composed and performed music and become filmmakers, creating a lasting record of the history of local people and schools. Combining heritage and the digital world has brought schools, communities and multiple generations together, in both the production and the celebration of the digital outcomes.
